JOHN RICHMOND

John Richmond is a founding director of the Human Trafficking Institute, that exists to decimate modern slavery at its source by empowering police and prosecutors to stop traffickers. Working inside criminal justice systems, the Institute provides the embedded experts, world-class training, investigative resources, and evidence-based research necessary to free victims.

John's work to combat human trafficking has earned numerous honors, including: being named one of the "Prosecutors of the Year" by the Federal Law Enforcement Foundation.

John frequently serves as an expert on human trafficking, for the United Nation's Working Group on Trafficking in Persons and at the European Union's multilateral meetings on human trafficking. He has trained judges, prosecutors, federal agents, law enforcement officers, non-governmental organizations, and international delegations on human trafficking investigative and prosecutorial strategies.

John has taught Human Trafficking Law, Policy, and Litigation at Vanderbilt School of Law and he is a regular contributor to the Storyline blog. Prior to forming the Human Trafficking Institute and joining the Department of Justice, John worked on human trafficking crimes as the Director of the International Justice Mission's slavery work in India.

DON BREWSTER

When Don Brewster first travelled to Cambodia in 2005, he was assured that other than poverty, everything in the country was fine. He learned the horrible truth just two days after returning to the states when he and his wife, Bridget, saw a Dateline NBC special. The topic? Child sex trafficking in Cambodia.

Horrified by what he saw, Don says, "The very children I held hands with and saw running in the streets were not just trying to survive poverty. Many were living in hell, enduring torture... I couldn't believe it was right under my nose and I didn't even know it."

Learning this truth sparked Don to form Agape International Missions, an organization dedicated to rescuing and rehabilitating child trafficking victims and restoring communities. Together, Don and Bridget have opened multiple homes for child sex trafficking survivors, including AIM Restoration Home (ARH) and Rahab's House, a network of community centers in Svay Pak. These centers provide health care and education to the community and act as a safe place for children to spend time.

"Our goal is to defeat child sex trafficking. We will fight until we're victorious," says Don. "We need as many soldiers as we can get."
